Headline:
Snow clearing to a clear and dry night. Icy.

Today:
This morning will see a band of snow, sometimes heavy, moving northeast across the country, trailed by scattered, possibly wintry, showers. Snow returning from the north this afternoon, though becoming lighter and more patchy. Cold with a risk of ice. Maximum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Tonight:
Last of the snow will clear south early this evening, leaving a cold but clear and dry night for most. Some cloud and scattered showers along coasts. Frosty and icy. Minimum temperature -9 deg C (16 deg F).

Monday:
A largely dry and sunny day, though the north may see the odd localised shower, and some cloud may develop inland during the afternoon. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Tuesday starts largely dry, though a band of rain edging in from the southwest. Wednesday and Thursday cloudy with outbreaks of rain, possibly heavy, and strong winds.
